Preface

This report on "Italy's 2009 G8: Plans for the Summit" is compiled by the G8 Research Group largely from public sources as an aid to researchers and other stakeholders interested in the 2009 G8 Summit. It will be updated periodically as plans for the 2009 Summit evolve. This report adds material on the physical summit, Italy's internal preparations and G8 ministerial meetings.

Introduction: Italy's 2009 G8

Italy will host the G8's 2009 Summit. It was previously announced that La Maddalena would serve as the summit site; however, this has yet to be confirmed and recent reports suggest that the location may change. So far it appears that the issues of climate change, energy, including nuclear energy, Africa, food security, intellectual property and the Heiligendamm process will all be a part of the Italians 2009 G8 agenda. The G5 countries of China, India, Brazil, Mexico and South Africa will be invited to attend part of the summit, as will the additional MEM participants of Australia, Indonesia and South Korea.

Agenda: The Policy Summit

Climate Change

Italian prime minister Silvio Berlusconi, whose country will host the 2009 G8 summit meeting, suggested toward the end of the 2008 Major Economies Meeting (MEM) that they should discuss the topic again when Italy hosts.¹ (July 11, 2008, Daily Yomiuri)

The G8 reaffirmed their commitment to take strong leadership in combating climate change and welcomed decisions taken in Bali as the foundation for reaching a global agreement in the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) process by 2009. They stated that they were committed to its successful conclusion. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

The G8 countries indicated that they need to ensure an effective and ambitious global post-2012 climate regime and that all major economies need to commit to meaningful mitigation actions to be bound in the international agreement to be negotiated by the end of 2009. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

The MEM nations committed to continue to work constructively together to promote the success of the Copenhagen climate change conference in 2009. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

Energy

The G8 pledged to compile national reports with the help of the International Energy Agency (IEA) and to update them for the 2009 summit. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

Nuclear Energy

The G8 countries agreed that transfers of enrichment equipment, facilities and technology to any additional state in the next year [2009] will be subject to conditions that, at a minimum, do not permit or enable replication of the facilities; and where technically feasible reprocessing transfers to any additional state will be subject to those same conditions. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

Global Economy

Financial Crisis

Italian finance minister Giulio Tremonti said that Italy is going to use its G8 presidency to put forth new rules to avoid financial crisis such as the current one. He singled out tax havens and false accounting as two areas where tighter regulations were needed.² (September 28, 2008, Reuters News)

According to Italian economy minister Giulio Tremonti, Italy is planning to establish new rules to avoid financial crises like the current one when it takes over the G8 presidency in January. "It is not a bank that failed, it's the whole system," Tremonti said. He believes the international surveillance mechanisms are inadequate. "We must have new rules, and it is up to the governments to make them," Tremonti said, adding that Italy would raise that issue when it took over chairing the G8. He said that tax havens and false accounting were two particular areas where tighter rules were necessary.³ (September 16, 2008, Reuters News)

Africa

Education

The G8 have committed to train, including through appropriate multilateral institutions, 100,000 teachers by 2009, with a particular focus on high-quality literacy skills. (Commitment pledged in 2004 at the American Sea Island summit)

The G8 pledged to monitor the Fast Track Initiative (FTI), including meeting shortfalls, through a report to be delivered at the 2009 Summit. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

Water

The G8 acknowledged the need to accelerate the achievement of the internationally agreed goals on water and sanitation. They pledged to reinvigorate their efforts to implement the Evian Water Action Plan and to review it on the basis of a progress report prepared by our water experts by the 2009 Summit. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

Food and Agriculture

United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization Director General Diouf has already been in contact with Italian authorities about moving forward a plan to create a world network of food and agriculture experts in order to assess future needs and risks globally at next year's G8 summit. Diouf believes that 30 billion dollars per year must be mobilized in order to double food production to feed a world population of 9 billion by 2050. "In this connection, as president of the G8 next year, Italy bears a historic responsibility," Diouf said.⁴ (September 17, 2008, ANSA English Media Service)

At the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) summit in June, and at the last G8 meeting in Japan, the Italian Government confirmed it intended to keep issues such as food security, the fight against poverty and sustainable agricultural development high on the international political agenda. Food security, with a special focus on Africa, will be a priority during the Italian G8 presidency in 2009.⁵ (July 22, 2008, New Press)

The G8 has committed to work with governments and other donors to realize the goal of attaining food security for five million chronically food insecure people by 2009. (Commitment pledged in 2004 at the American Sea Island summit)

The G8 promised to review the progress on the food crisis issue at the 2009 summit. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako Summit)

Peace Support

The G8 tasked experts to discuss their efforts for peace support for Africa, in cooperation with the UN and regional organizations, and to submit a progress report prior to the Summit in 2009. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

⁵ News Press (July 22, 2008), "Italy gives euros14 million for food security."

Intellectual Property

The G8 committed to take stock of the progress made to strengthen intellectual property rights protection by the time of the 2009 summit. (Commitment pledged in 2007 at the German Heiligendamm summit)

Terrorism

The G8 stressed the urgent need for full implementation of existing standards, including Financial Action Task Force (FATF) Special Recommendations VIII and IX, and asked their experts to take steps to share information, evaluate threats, assess new trends and promote implementation and review these efforts by 2009. (Commitment pledged in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

Heiligendamm Process

The G8 countries committed to issue a final report on the Heiligendamm process at the 2009 summit. (Commitment pledged in 2007 at the German Heiligendamm summit and reiterated in 2008 at the Japanese Hokkaido Toyako summit)

Outreach and Expansion

Italy will push for expansion to include countries such as China, India and Brazil when it assumes the G8 presidency in 2009, according to finance minister Giulio Tremonti. “We can no longer wait ... to transform the G8 into the G14, to let China enter, to let India enter, to let South Africa, Mexico and Brazil enter,” he said.⁶ (September 28, 2008, Reuters News)

Italy will seek closer engagement with China on global issues when Italy hosts the G8 next year, Italian foreign minister Franco Frattini said. “I intend to closely engage with China on key topics on the G8’s agenda such as climate change, sustainable energy policy, global terrorism and poverty.” Italy will attach particular importance to consulting China on stabilizing the border between Pakistan and Afghanistan.⁷ (August 10, 2008, China Daily)

Italian prime minister Berlusconi has “confirmed support for Egypt’s aspirations to be associated with the G8 outreach process.” Italy has a say on the matter, since it is due to hold the presidency of the G8 in 2009, with a format which Berlusconi agreed upon at the recent summit at Hokkaido in Japan, and which makes provision for more space for emerging economies and for ‘outreach’ projects.⁸ (July 23, 2008, BBC Monitoring European)

⁶ Reuters News (September 28, 2008), “Italy aims to expand G8 to include China, Brazil.”

⁸ BBC Monitoring European (July 23, 2008), “Italy’s Berlusconi holds talks with Mubarak, backs Egypt over G8 outreach.”

There is debate within the G8 about whether to go the next step and absorb the G5 fully into the G8, creating a G13. There has been talk that a decision may be made at next year's summit in Italy.⁹ (July 11, 2008, The Star)

The 2009 summit will include an expanded session which will see the participation of the Group of Five (G5) of China, India, South Africa, Mexico and Brazil. However, it is unlikely that the issue of expansion will come up as Italian prime minister Berlusconi opposed discussing the topic at the 2008 summit.¹⁰ (July 9, 2008, ANSA-English Media Service)

Participation

Italian Prime Minister Berlusconi has said that Russia will participate in the 2009 G8 summit. "Doubts over Moscow taking part in the next G8 summit? There are no doubts whatsoever," he said. Berlusconi also said that relations between Italy and the United States had not been damaged over his close relationship with former Russian President and now Prime Minister Putin. He said that relations with Washington were 'warm and friendly' and that there were 'absolutely no problems.'¹¹ (September 10, 2008, ANSA English Media Service)

European diplomats say that Bush administration hawks are suspicious of Italian prime minister Berlusconi's personal ties to Putin and are worried about Italy's G8 presidency which will begin in January. Berlusconi is apparently planning to invite Putin to the G8 summit in Sardinia, while the U.S. was happy that the G7 (which excludes Russia) united to rebuke Russia's recognition of Abkhazia and South Ossetia. Italian officials deny that Berlusconi has turned his back on the Bush administration and insist that he still enjoys a close relationship with the president.¹² (September 10, 2008, Financial Times Europe)

Program

Day 1: G8 leaders meet alone.

Day 2: Discussion between G8 and Heiligendamm Partners (also known as the G5 countries).

Day 3: G8 plus G5 plus Africa. At the end of the day the G8 leaders will meet alone again.

Process: The Physical Summit

Site

Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi has hinted that next year's G8 summit may not take place on the small island of La Maddalena as planned. Berlusconi said it is "possible" that Italy may change the venue of next year's G8 summit to a different place if the country finds it difficult to set up necessary facilities there, according to Italian reporters, who attended his news conference in Japan. Berlusconi, however, did not specify an alternative candidate site for the 35th summit at the news conference. This is the first time the Italian leader has floated the idea of changing the site of next year's G8 summit from La Maddalena. They said there are rumors that the annual meeting may instead take place in the premier's luxurious villa 'La Certosa' in Sardinia, where Berlusconi hosted a meeting in April with Russian prime minister Vladimir Putin, who was president of the country at that time. In 2007, Italy officially announced that the next summit would be held on the tiny island off northern Sardinia, where the United States had a naval base until recently. The chair's summary of the Heiligendamm summit last year stated that the 34th summit would be held in Toyako, but this year's summary only said the next one would be held in Italy, without further specifying the location.¹³ (July 9, 2008, Kyodo News)

Berlusconi confirmed that Italy intended to host the 2009 summit on the island of La Maddalena, off the northeast Sardinian coast, but said an alternative site existed if the reconversion of the ex-US Navy base there could not be completed in time.¹⁴ (July 9, 2008, ANSA-English Media Service)

Government Preparations: External

Bilateral Meetings

Italian prime minister Berlusconi is planning to meet with Angela Merkel on November 18 in Trieste.¹⁵ (July 9, 2008, ANSA-English Media Service)

Other

Italy is in support of Russia's proposal to hold a European security conference, which Russia believes could avert the re-emergence of dividing lines on the continent, the Italian president said. Russian President Dmitry Medvedev has proposed bringing together European states, Russia, the United States and Canada to work out a new
